HOAGLAND'S
NEW PATENT SHAFT COUPLING!
W. E. COOPER
HAS PURCHASED THE RIGHT FOR THIS County of the above Patent, and will hereafter use it in the construction of all the Vehicles manufactured at his extensive
Carriage Factory,
Corner of Second and Morrison Streets.
He respectfully refers to the following
CARD.
Having examined the New Patent Shaft Coupling invented by H. R. Hoagland, we feel pleasure in informing the public that in our opinion it is the safest and best method of connecting shafts or tongues to all vehicles that has ever been used.
It fastens without bolt or screw, and is therefore easily and speedily separated. It contains Gutta Percha so as to be entirely free from the rattling sound which so often disturbs restless horses. It is easily changed so that the shafts or tongue may be detached in an instant, and is convenient, safe and secure.
It is easy to change to this style of coupling any buggy or other vehicle now in use, and with small expense. We have come to the conclusion to use this new invention ourselves and recommend its use in all cases. We consider it far superior to the Brewster Patent heretofore considered the best in use.

Rupert's Land or Red River Country.

Comparatively few people are well posted on the location, geography, form of government and present status of the Red River country, about which we are hearing so much of late by telegraph. Premising that the seat of hostilities is just on the northern borders of Minnesota and Dakota, and that the country is connected more directly with the American States than with the Canadas by the usual courses of land travel and river navigation and of intercourse and trade, the situation may be very correctly taken in by the perusal of the following extracts from an article in the N. Y. Herald of Dec. [illegible]:

THE HUDSON BAY COMPANY.

The history of the formation of these settlements can be briefly told. In 1670 the Hudson Bay Company was formed under a royal charter from Charles the Second, which granted them all the country north of what was called the divide, where the waters separate, flowing off to Hudson's Bay. The only consideration to be given for this charter was the royal prerogative to certain game and a pledge to discover the northwest passage. The first item amounted to nothing, and the company excused themselves from making explorations after the passage on the ground that it never would be available if found. During the first twenty years of the company's existence its profits from furs were so great that, notwithstanding losses sustained by the capture by the French of some of their establishments, amounting in value to £118,014, they were enabled to make a payment to the proprietors in 1684 of fifty per cent, another payment in 1688 of fifty per cent, and in 1689 a payment of twenty five per cent. In 1690 the stock was trebled, without any call being made, besides affording to the proprietors a payment of twenty five per cent on the newly created stock. From 1692 to 1697 the company lost property to the amount of £97,500, but in 1720 their circumstances were so improved that they again trebeled their capital stock, with only a call of ten per cent from the proprietors. On this stock they paid dividends averaging nine per cent for many years, showing profits on the originally subscribed capital stock annually paid up of between sixty and seventy per cent per annum from 1690 to 1800, a period of 110 years. Up to this time the Hudson Bay Company enjoyed a monopoly of the fur trade, and reaped a rich harvest of wealth and influence. In 1783 the Northwest Company was formed, having its headquarters at Montreal, and soon rose to such formidable power as to make the territory which the two companies traded in a scene of feuds and bloodshed, involving the destruction of property, the demoralization of the Indians and the ruin of the fur trade. In 1821 a union took place between the two Companies, under the title of the Hudson Bay Company. The affairs of the company were managed by a Governor-in-Chief, sixteen chief factors, twenty nine chief traders, five surgeons, eighty seven clerks, sixty seven postmasters, several hundred voyagers and a large number of temporary employes of different grades, amounting in all to over 14,000 persons. The Governor-in-Chief exercised a general control over the whole interior management in British America, and was assisted by a council, consisting of the chief officers of the company, whose deliberations were conducted in secret. The whole power of this organization was directed toward preventing the formation of any settlements other than of fur traders within the territory, as agricultural operations would interfere with game. An attempt was made in 1821 under the patronage of Lord Selkirk, to form a colony on Red River, but the hostility of the Fur Company, executed through its traders and Indians, broke up the settlement and the colonists sought refuge in the forts. Finally, upon the consolidation of the two companies, a few settlements were permitted to thrive, but their agricultural operations were limited to a very small scale. Affairs remained in this condition many years, until the tide of emigration to Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota commenced to flow over the border into the far settlements, and restless adventurers became numerous through all that section. Gradually the fur business became less remunerative, and the Hudson Bay Company saw that their control over the country was becoming weakened, and two years ago they sold to the Canadian Government, for the sum of £300,000, all their rights and interests in the Northwest territory, reserving to itself the agricultural lands adjacent to its trading posts.

THE [illegible].

The most valuable part of this territory is included in the Red River country, and comprises an area of over 1,500,000 acres of arable land. The Red river, rising in the central part of Minnesota, flows northward through this country, and on its banks and tributaries numerous flourishing settlements have been formed. After the purchase of the territory by the Dominion of Canada arrangements were at once made by that Government to take possession. McDougall was appointed Lieutenant Governor of the Territory, and surveyors sent out to subdivide the public land. The sentiments of the settlements respecting this action are fully expressed by a correspondent in Pembina, on the border, who writes September 27, as follows:

You have doubtless learned through the public press that some time since the Hudson Bay Company and the British Government entered into an agreement whereby it is stipulated that the Dominion of Canada shall acquire certain rights and interests of said company in the Northwest Territory or Rupert's Land upon the payment of the Dominion Government to said company of the sum of £300,000.

The Dominion has accepted the terms, and I understand has paid over the money. At any rate the Dominion has appointed Mr. McDougall, a prominent Canadian politician, Lieutenant Governor of the Northwest Territory, whose arrival here is duly expected. The Dominion Government has also sent a number of surveyors, who now (when not prevented by the people and Indians) are townshipping and subdividing the public lands. By an act of the Dominion Parliament the Lieutenant Governor is to be assisted by a legislative council, but, mark you, said council is to be appointed by the Governor. And it appears that a pack of half famished pets of the Government are to be imported from Canada to act as lawgivers for the Red river people. The Red river settlement has a population of from 15,000 to 20,000 souls, Indians not counted. The people have never been consulted with reference to the transfer of government, and this attempt of Canada to gobble them has aroused almost universal indignation in the British Red river country, and the people are united in opposition to the Dominion Government.

The people demand the following guarantees:

1. The right to elect their own Legislature.
2. That the Legislature shall have power to pass all acts of a local nature by a two-thirds vote over the veto of the Executive.
3. No law of a local nature to be binding until sanctioned by the Legislature.
4. A free homestead and pre-emption law.
5. An Indian policy calculated to insure good will and quiet in the territory.
6. All the executive, legislative, civil and military expenses for a given number of years to be paid out of the Dominion Treasury.
7. An appropriation to be expended in the internal improvement of the Territory.

After placing these guarantees beyond peradventure then the proposition of annexation to the Dominion to be submitted to a vote of the people.

The people are fully organized, and as a frontier people are always armed and equipped. The Governor will on his arrival be [illegible], and if [illegible] of the [illegible] of his time save that of drawing his pay from the Dominion Treasury. [illegible] the great Canadian Dominion can take into consideration their geographical position and the fact of their being backed up by very powerful bands of warriors. Suppose the Dominion should attempt coercion, how would they get an army to the Red River country? Not through the United States territory, of course. Via Lake Superior, Lake of the Woods and through the marshes to Red River would not be thought of, much less attempted. The only route open to them would be by ship to York Factory, Hudson Bay, and thence [illegible] miles by way of lakes and numerous portages. By this route it will require over a year to [illegible] the Indians before reaching Lake Winnipeg. The people of the British Red River country can with impunity defy any power save that of the United States. Their isolated and almost inaccessible position renders them quite independent of the East.

SUBSEQUENT EVENTS.

Governor McDougall arrived at Pembina from Canada on the 30th of September. In the meantime military companies had been organized and guards placed on all the roads and passes leading to Fort Garry, the headquarters of the government. On the 2d of November a company of Red River cavalry surrounded the Hudson Bay Company's fort near Pembina, where Governor McDougall and staff were quartered, and ordered the party to leave the Territory by nine o'clock the next morning.

The Governor demanded a parley, but was informed that the troops had come to execute an order and not to hold a council.

Promptly at nine o'clock on the [illegible] they entered the stockade, arrested and secretly [illegible] William Hallett, guide, Colonel Dennis, Surveyor General, whereupon the Governor and party made for their horses and wagons and evacuated the fort without further warning. The entire party recrossed the international boundary and encamped on United States soil near the place, out of the range of the enemy's guns.

Immediately after the Governor and party had recrossed the boundary a portion of the troops started for headquarters, taking with them Hallett, the prisoner guide, while the captain with the remainder of his command, went into camp near the international boundary, to observe the movements of the expelled officials.

A provisional government was formed by the insurgents, with John Bruce as president and Louis Rielle commander-in-chief of the military forces, then numbering several hundred men, and Fort Garry was seized by the insurgents and occupied by Provisional Governor Bruce. Affairs remained in this condition for several days, the English, Scotch and French settlers supporting the insurrection and the Americans remaining neutral. On the 19th of November Governor McTavish, of Assiniboia, issued a proclamation denouncing the seizure of the public and private property by the insurgents, charging the insurrectionary forces to disperse, and closing as follows:

You are dealing with a crisis out of which may come incalculable good or immeasurable evil, and with all the weight of my official authority, and the influence of my individual position, let me finally charge you to adopt only such means as are lawful, constitutional, rational and safe.

WILLIAM McTAVISH,
Governor of Assiniboia.

The Governor was immediately put under close confinement by the insurgents, and Captain Campbell, of McDougall's party, upon attempting to enter Fort Garry, was arrested, sent to United States soil under guard, and forbidden to return to the territory under pain of being shot. The goods and provisions of the Hudson Bay Company were seized to supply the insurgents, and the whole country organized against the Canadian authorities. On the 9th of December the Hudson Bay Company's fort near Pembina was seized by the insurrectionists and several of Governor McDougall's party were captured. At last accounts from the seat of war the forces under Rielle were in possession of the whole Red river country, but there were reports that the Indians were being rallied by the Canadian authorities against the settlements, and serious apprehensions existed that in case of active war between the settlers and Canadians the Indians might join in and inaugurate extermination of all the whites. It is also stated that it is not the intention of the Canadian government to complete the purchase of the Northwest Territory until next spring, and not until the Dominion is able to assert its authority by the presence of an armed force sent in by the way of Fort William. In the meantime the Hudson Bay Company is to conduct affairs in the Territory.

HOW SOME OF THE SENATORS LOOK.—A Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune says:

Parson Brownlow, the Richelieu of Tennessee, still sits the mark of curious wondering eyes, with the look of a dying man, but with his old obstinate spirit of vitality and fight strong in him yet—outwardly all a tremble with disease, inwardly, all will and fixed resolve; an aspen with the heart of an oak. Simon Cameron seems still vigorous, and bears in his high bred face the shrewd, sagacious look of a man who sees deep and far—in his cool, cautious way a political prophet. Senator Nye looks what he is, a man of "infinite jest" and bonhomie. Carl Schurz seems to the manner Senatorial born, has the air of an elegant scholar and happily retains but few marks of the soldier. The two blondes of the Senate—Conkling of New York and Stewart of Nevada, are esteemed men of mark by the galleries. They come as they went—the one with his glossy pet curl still lying like a sunny peninsula in the broad expanse of his brow, the other looking as though the winds of the Sierra were yet playing with his wild locks; one dainty, the other careless; one the result of Eastern civilization, the other a representative Western man of the best type. Both are men of admirable ability, but one knows it and the other doesn't, or one is alert and the other is a little lazy. Carpenter of Wisconsin, of whose eloquence we have heard such great things, looks on the whole up to his reputation. He is dark and powerfully made. People say he is like Webster, but I confess I can't see it. He walks about the Senate chamber with hands in his pockets, in an easy Western swing, which is too full of real manliness to be a swagger and too energetic for a Senator.

A HIGH AUTHORITY.—The report of the Commissioner of Agriculture says that the impolicy of running to single staples is made apparent this year in the poor return which the wheat grower is getting for his labor and investment, while the producer in a more diversified agricultural industry is having a better market and better prices. It continues that "the tendency of present prices of farm products indicates the necessity of increased attention to the propagation, growing and fattening of farm animals and to the production of meats, poultry, butter, cheese, milk, and the wheat interest is at present suffering from one of those periodical seasons of depression which are the inevitable result of exclusive reliance upon a single crop." The report then points out how a diversification of industry would obviate this misfortune. This line of argument on the part of the Commissioner of Agriculture is the same which the Press of California has been urging upon its farmers. The Commissioner occupies a stand point from which he looks over the whole field, and he is therefore able to state actual results. Being authority on what he says on this subject, we hope to see practical consideration given to his words.—Sacramento Record.

RELIGION BY ROTE.—Sir Eardly Gideon Culling Eardly, the English baronet who has just been pardoned out of prison for bigamy, is descended from Sir Sampson Gideon, a rich Jew broker in the reign of George the Second. Horace Walpole relates that he was one of the principal buyers of his father's pictures at Houghton after Sir Robert's death, whereat the dainty bachelor of Strawberry Hill was greatly scandalized. Gideon died in 1762, and twenty seven years thereafter his son was created an Irish Peer under the title of Baron Eardly of Spalding. Old Sampson Gideon bred his children as Christians. Walpole tells this irreverent story of him. He had a mind to know what proficiency his son had made in his new religion. "I began," he says, "and asked him who made him. He said 'God.' I then asked him who redeemed him. He replied very readily 'Christ.' 'Well then,' continued old Gideon, 'I was at the end of my interrogatories, and I did not know what other question to put to him. At last I said, 'Who gave you that hat?' 'The Holy Ghost,' said the boy."

Commissioner Wells' Report—The Burdens of Taxation.

[From the N. Y. Times, Dec. 2.]

The [illegible] which Mr. Wells has now [illegible] in his various reports [illegible] the Press has been [illegible] the [illegible] of the Atlantic these reports have been models of research, [illegible] labor and the application of scientific principles to practical affairs. In fact they have almost constituted an era in the history of American financial science. No public documents since Alexander Hamilton's writings on finance have appeared in this country so [illegible] able and powerful. The conclusions may be in some things in advance of the present thought of the nation, and may conflict with the supposed interests of certain influential bodies of manufacturers, but that they are formed after the most careful research, the most extended comparison of facts, and under a high and conscientious purpose, no candid man can doubt. To dismiss them as "trash," or "theories," or as opinions paid for by "foreign gold," is simply impertinent. They are crowded with immensely important facts and most vigorous reasonings. They are to form the basis for the thought-out system of taxation which we must adopt before financial health is regained.

No journal or public man in this country can afford to dismiss Mr. Wells with a sneer. This journal, as our readers are aware, has always held, in harmony with the Commissioner, that even contraction would not bring back financial health unless the burdens of excessive taxation were removed from production. As it is now the purchasing power of the whole community is lessened by the enormous drain for taxes. Production becomes so expensive under it that even with a gold basis for the currency we could not compete with foreign nations in our manufactures, and all classes would still be weighed down by high prices. Mr. Wells devotes a very ingenious section of his report to a demonstration of the effect of these fiscal burdens on one important interest which usually feels itself somewhat exempt from taxation—the agricultural. In a series of interesting figures, he demonstrates the present losses of farmers in all the articles which they purchase. Thus 100 bushels of wheat would bring the farmer in 1865 6,824 pounds of bar iron, now they will only give 4,154 pounds. If he wants axes, they would have yielded him then 16 1-9 dozen, in 1869 11 1-4 dozen. If he purposed furnishing his house with ingrain, two-ply Lowell carpeting, this amount of wheat will only give him 103 11-13 yards against 193 1-3 yards then. If he buys blankets, he gets 26 1-2 pairs for his grain, where he got 14 1-2 pairs in 1859. In boots he obtains 3 1-7 dozen, when he used to get 6 3-4 dozen. If he is buying stoves, he must take 14 1-5 for his 100 bushels, when he once received 24 1-6. Should he be laying up fish stores for the winter, he is still more unfortunate, for he can only get 5 barrels of mackerel, against 13 1-2 in 1859, and 1,600 pounds of codfish, against 3,625 pounds ten years ago. What is the more aggravating to the farmer, this immense increase of cost in the materials for which he exchanges his wheat is not compensated by any great gain to the revenues of the country, for in the matter of blankets, as the Commissioner says, with a certain spice of dry humor, "If he should endeavor to console himself with the reflection that the Treasury gains to the extent that he loses, and that through his sacrifices the period for the extinguishment of the national debt is shortened, he will find the receipts of the duties on blankets, under the tariff, to have been in 1867 $207,505, and in 1868, $25,288."

The farmer's wheat produced under these burdens of taxation, of course costs a great deal more than does a similar quantity in Europe, and yet it sells for the same price. Moreover, all his expenses of forwarding, exchanging and exporting are increased by the taxation and the unsettled currency. It is believed that the cost of transportation, storing and managing wheat or flour within the country is ten per cent greater than it would be under a normal system.

Every exporter, too, must charge an insurance on his risks of a change in the currency, which varies from one to four per cent. All these losses, and the added expense of production from taxation, are not borne by the European consumer, or even in part by him, but entirely by the farmer, as the price of wheat is governed by its cost of production in Eastern Europe, which is very low. The price throughout this country depends also on the price of the surplus exported, so that all the burdens of the production fall on the farmer alone.

One great consolation which has always been held out to the American farmer under taxation has been that he was deriving a liberal home market from domestic manufactures. Mr. Wells, however, rudely demolishes this comfort, for it appears that the whole product of agriculture reaches the immense sum of three thousand three hundred millions of dollars. On the other hand the number of persons directly employed in two of the most important branches of manufacture, the woolen and cotton, are 215,000. The price of board for operatives is about $3 per week, so that the agricultural products consumed by the laborers in these branches would amount in value to $33,540,000 per annum. If an equal amount be added for the pig iron and bar iron industry, and the total be doubled to cover the indirect consumption attributable to these industries, the result will be $134,160,000, or 4 1-10 per cent of the whole annual agricultural product of the country. So that the consumption of four per cent of their products at home is all the benefit the farmers derive from the enormous burdens laid upon them in taxation.

This is only one instance of the weight of taxation upon production, but its value consists in its being found in a class supposed to be comparatively exempt, and in one on whose welfare the prosperity of all other classes rests.

The Great American Hobby Horse, Annexation

There are fresh troubles in Mexico and we suppose we shall be treated to the usual revival of annexation talk and the spread eagle harangues about 'manifest destiny' and this boundless continent is ours, etc. Annexation seems to be about the first thing that pops into an American's mind upon hearing of rebellion or trouble among our neighbors For twenty years or more we have had periodical attacks of annexation annexation of Mexico annexation of Cuba annexation of Canada Sandwich Islands British Columbia and Greenland's Icy Mountains ' It would not be at all a violent prediction to say that if to-day we should hear of a rebellion among the Terra del Fuegans, we should be able to read in about half the daily papers of to-morrow articles in favor of annexing Terra del Fuego Island to the United States as the best way of disposing of Terra del Fuegan troubles, we should have a rehash of the manifest destiny of Uncle Sam to become the owner of all the lands adjoining his farm, the spread of civilization, freedom and beneficent institutions the advantages which the stalwart savages of the Cape Horn district would enjoy through social and political association with us, and, on the other hand what an immense addition it would be to the commercial and maritime power of our government if we only had a perpetual iceberg of our own at which our merchantmen and vessels of war could land at pleasure and from which our hardy sailors before the mast could chip off lumps of American ice to cool the cobblers of the American nobs in the cabin

At each fresh trouble in Mexico, our newspapers and highflyer politicians have indulged in this sort of nonsense as though they felt a necessity of periodically making fools and asses of themselves in order to keep in accord with the genius of Liberty at whose shrine have been laid more absurdities than were ever dedicated to the mythological head of the human "Dampfool family," and as though the American people had a divine right to swoop down upon and gobble any land whose people might not be able at the moment to agree precisely upon the ethics of local government These paroxysms of annexation always take our people just when "the party of the other part" are in poor condition through affliction or angry strife to defend their interests, and thus the manifestation bears the ugly appearance of an irrepressible desire to steal something or to acquire property by such tricks of trade as are practiced by brigands who put a pistol's muzzle to your head and cry, "stand and deliver."

To judge by a sort of popular outcry, we have been a dozen times upon the point of swallowing Mexico, the greasers and the Halls of the Montezumas included, Cuba, with her Spaniards, negroes and canebrakes in one unassorted mass; Canada, her Parliament, nobility, lakes and St. Lawrence; the Sandwich Islands, kanakas, volcanoes and all, and all these without regard to possible dietetic results. These things, ludicrous as they make us appear to foreign eyes, have also the effect, more than anything else, to create distrust, jealousy and fear of us among the smaller powers around, who have no awful-visaged mammas nor big brothers to stand between them and harm. Distrust generated by such means has more than once stood between us and advantageous transactions in eminent domain interests on both sides of both the great seas, and it would seem that nothing but the "stupid conservatism" of our successive administrations of the latter day, has saved us from finding, upon our approach, each surrounding nation rolled up like a porcupine with defensive quills standing guard at every point to discourage intimacy and annexation.

There are two features of this habitual talk of annexation which are particularly senseless The first is the conclusion, reached instantly by a leap of infinite length, that whenever and wherever the people of a neighboring province manifest discontent with their government, they are, therefore, ready and anxious to be annexed at once to the United States, as though there could be no other possible connection or condition toward which to gravitate This comes of national egotism—the manifestation of a national phrenological bump, which is a good enough bump when not so extravagantly developed as to dwarf good sense The other feature is the pouncing upon every bit of ground, to annex it, which may seem to be in any sense in the general market, whether it be of any present or prospective value to the United States The queries might with reason be put, what do we want with Mexico, with its heterogeneous, turbulent and ungovernable population? Would its eventual peaceable possession be worth the cost of reclaiming the country to civilization, christianity and peace? Questions of like import might be propounded with regard to other territory toward which American annexationists are constantly scampering off. But until American restlessness, impudence, acquisitiveness, tinged unquestionably with a little reckless dishonesty, and morbid appetite for sensation, shall be somewhat reformed, we do not know that we can expect anything of this class of which we have been talking, but that they will ride their hobby horses whether the race be to the devil or to some more desirable goal

Editorial Notes.

The clearest case we have lately seen of effrontery, disregard for the truths of history and impiousness, is that of the Democratic Press when it says "The Democratic party is no more responsible for the war and its consequences than were the eleven Apostles for the crucifixion of Saviour"

Tammany is early on the wing A prominent Western newspaper asserts that the ring has sent an embassy West to log roll for Hoffman as the next Democratic candidate for President Considering the turn the Democracy has recently taken on the subject of repudiation, it is not unlikely that Hoffman or some other bond holding Democrat of the East will carry even Pendleton's own State in the next Democratic National Convention

The Indiana Democrats are unquestionably of the "sturdy breed and not to be put down by slight discouragements It don't seem to matter much to them that their pet Pendletonian policy of repudiation received the other day in Congress the most pointed rebuke from the leaders of their own party, ever administered by one wing of any party to another in this country Notwithstanding the sagacious men of the Democratic party made special declaration that they were not in the repudiation boat, these 'sturdy' Pendletonians of Indiana are still clamoring for repudiation and greenbacks. One would have thought that after such a repudiation as the Democratic members of Congress gave Pendleton on Monday the other day the western Democracy wouldn't want any more of that article

The Democratic Press of Salem speaks of the Burlingame Chinese treaty as guaranteeing 'to Chinamen coming to the United States all the protection and privileges here that are given to immigrants from the most favored nation The statement either through intention or ignorance is incorrect Section 6th which is the one that refers to this subject says 'Chinese subjects visiting or residing in the United States shall enjoy the same privileges immunities and exemptions in respect to travel or residence as may be there enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nations The specification is in favor of travel or residence and cannot be held to refer to any other privilege immunity or exemption The same section has a proviso against naturalization which is a privilege extended to the subjects of the 'favored nations residing in the United States following and by virtue of which are numerous other privileges which are denied the Chinese by the proviso mentioned

Tributes to Stanton

We find in the last received papers from the East, notices of distinguished tributes to the memory of the late Edwin M Stanton The President issued the following order

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON Dec 24 1869

The painful duty devolves upon the President of announcing to the people of the United States the death of one of its most distinguished citizens and faithful servants Hon E M Stanton, which occurred in this city at an early hour this morning He was distinguished in the councils of the nation during the entire period of its recent struggle for national existence first as Attorney General, then as Secretary of War He was unceasing in his labors earnest and fearless in his assumption of responsibilities necessary to his country's success, respected by all good men and feared by wrong doers In his death the bar bench and nation sustain a loss which will be mourned by all As a mark of respect to his memory, it is ordered that the Executive Mansion and the several Departments at Washington be draped in mourning and that all business be suspended on the day of his funeral

(Signed) U S GRANT

The following order was issued by Secretary Belknap

WAR DEPARTMENT, Dec 24, 1869

The following order has been received from the President of the United States [See above] The eminent ability of the late Secretary of War, his great legal acquirements, his firm patriotism and his sturdy devotion to duty in the most trying time of the Republic, when many others faltered, have commanded the admiration of the country, while his management of this Department during the days when a man of determined energy and will was demanded, has marked his term of office as one unequalled in administration It is ordered that the offices connected with the Department of War be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days, and all business suspended therein on the day of the funeral, and that on the day after the receipt of this order at each military post, fifteen guns will be fired at appropriate intervals, commencing at meridian.

(Signed) WM W BELKNAP,
Secretary of War.

Orders were issued from all the Departments suspending public work draping the offices with mourning, and closing the doors on the day of the funeral.

A meeting of the Senators was held, who, after arranging to attend the funeral, adopted the following resolutions

Resolved, That we have received with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Edwin M. Stanton, whose eminent public service entitled him to the grateful thanks of the people of the United States

Resolved, That we tender to his widow and family our sincere sympathy in their bereavement, and, in token of our respect for his memory, we will, in a body, attend his funeral and follow his remains to the grave

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished to the widow of the deceased

Members of the House held a similar meeting and adopted resolutions of the same tenor

Flags on all public buildings were ordered at half mast Similar respects were paid in nearly all the cities. In many, the Mayors called public meetings or convened the members of the legislative councils to adopt proper expressions of grief All in all, it has seldom occurred in the history of our country that such general testimonials of grief and respect have been awarded to the memory of any man not a President or an ex President of the United States

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL

Mrs. Lincoln, says a Frankfort paper, will remove to Zurich, where she has bought a small house

Senator Sprague is said to be watching for an opportunity to make a ten hour speech on the eight-hour law and the finances

Governor Geary has received three anonymous letters of late threatening him with personal injury should he refuse to pardon Dr Schoeppe

Hiram Powers' statue of "Eve," now nearly finished, is said to excel his 'Greek Slave' and indeed to surpass anything he has previously produced

It is stated that, a day or two ago, six members of Congress called upon Attorney General Hoar and interrogated him as to legal points Mr Hoar replied, 'I am no attorney for Congress but law officer for the President " The Congressmen withdrew in high dudgeon, and it is said the circumstance was used against Mr Hoar in Executive session

Letters written by Andrew Johnson, Schuyler Colfax and Charles Sumner are offered for sale by the Leipsic autograph dealers at one dollar each. Grant and Sherman's fac-similes are rated at two, three and four dollars A long letter, written by Bismarck, costs four dollars and fifty cents The fac similes of Napoleon III and Victor Emanuel are offered for five dollars

The New York Sun says Mrs Elizabeth Cady Stanton is now closing up a very successful lecturing tour in the West which has extended from Cincinnati to St Paul On her return home she intends to resign the Presidency of the Woman's National Suffrage Association and the editorship of the Revolution so that she can devote more time to lecturing and to the completion of two books which she has partly written, one of which is to be entitled 'The Women of the Bible.' "

In the discussion on the crown jewels which took place in the Spanish Cortes the other day, there was, it seems, some exceedingly plain talking The Finance Minister Signor Figuerola, in a long speech which was well received by the house, said that the jewels in question had been stolen in the most scandalous manner They had been stolen he added, by two persons who were very well known Dona Maria Christina and Dona Isabella of Bourbon It was no wonder therefore that the Spaniards expelled the dynasty Another member of the House Senor Garcia Lopez wished that the Spanish Cabinet should demand in the proper quarter, the extradition of the criminals France having thieves enough of her own "

The New York Daily News (Ben Wood's paper walks into Judge Barnard after the following fashion Under the caption of the Bummer Judge," it says Barnard is the person to whom we allude as being guilty of drunkenness and corruption and totally unfit to occupy a seat upon the bench If he will commence a libel suit against us, we will prove him to be one of the most corrupt and debauched men that ever occupied an official position A Democratic legislature must impeach him or the whole party will be held responsible for the base acts of the Bummer Judge" We are constrained to make this statement because George G Barnard in defiance of the pledges of his friends has got on the drunken track which his unsteady feet have so long trod

EASTERN DATES TO JANUARY 9

Washington News

WASHINGTON Jan 9—Several Surveyors in Pennsylvania and Ohio recently had their commissions revoked by Commissioner Delano for the violation of duty especially for failing to have stamps properly cancelled

A public meeting was held last night [illegible] people being present for the furtherance of the proposed International Fair Gen Garfield Gen Howard and several others spoke and great enthusiasm was manifested Encouraging letters were read from the Governors of several States

There is much said in regard to the visit of a son of President Lopez to this city The truth is that he came to represent the interests of his father and to induce the administration to renew diplomatic intercourse with Paraguay The principal obstacles in the way of such a renewal is the uncertainty as to the present locality of Lopez it not being positively known whether he is on his own or some other territory About the same time that young Lopez arrived information was received that the allies were masters of Paraguay and that therefore the Lopez Court had no longer a practical existence

There is no doubt but that William Strong of Pennsylvania will be nominated successor to Associate Justice Grier for which place the late Secretary Stanton was confirmed

The Administration has taken no recent action concerning affairs in Cuba Such official intelligence as has been received show that both the Spaniards and Cubans exaggerate their respective positions The truth is that a regiment of Spanish troops can march through any locality subject only to annoyance occasionally by small bodies of Insurgents

WASHINGTON, Jan 9 The Postmaster General received a letter from the President of the International Steamship Company stating that the construction of the first two steam vessels was agreed upon and they expect they will make twenty five miles per hour in smooth water and cross the ocean in average time of eight days

Treaty for the Annexation of San Domingo

A treaty for the annexation of San Domingo was negotiated by President Baez and our commercial agent Perry, at the city of San Domingo This treaty, with the secret message of General Grant, will be sent to the Senate on Monday The truth of this statement is doubted by several Senators who are cognizant of the particulars of the negotiations They privately assert San Domingo to be of as much importance to us as the island of Cuba, as the acquisition of the one will more easily lead to the possession of the other Although this last treaty cannot be published or made known at present it, no doubt, contains the following propositions

1 The United States stipulates to pay $500 000

2 This money is to be devoted to liquidation of all the obligations of San Domingo, including the redemption of its currency, which is represented to be comparatively small in amount

3 In case the obligations assumed by the United States exceed the before mentioned sum, the public lands of San Domingo are pledged as security for the excess

4 For the liquidation of the obligations disinterested commissioners will be appointed by each contracting party

5 In consideration of the discharge of these obligations San Domingo cedes all forts, docks custom houses, and all other public buildings, arsenals, etc, and complete jurisdiction over the country

6 San Domingo will be annexed or acquired as territory and not as a State, and will be subject to legislation by Congress in the same manner as other Territories

7 The treaty will be valid to all intents and purposes, when the rate fixed by the Senate of the United States is confirmed by a vote of the majority of the citizens of San Domingo

Some excitement has been occasioned in South San Juan and vicinity, by the report that a prominent member of the San Francisco Bar has obtained a patent from the Government for all the land lying in that neighborhood, including San Juan

In a steep rock, six miles south of Dubuque (Iowa) an eccentric Englishman has excavated a dwelling It has three rooms, with seats couches, fireplaces, flues and all the conveniences carved in the living rock The occupant spends his time in studying botany and entomology His museum occupies one room

In Virginia (Nev) at the Mariposa Mill, on the night of December 26th, they counted twenty six distinct shocks, the steam perceptibly increasing at each shock The water in the Cole Tunnel Mining Company increased thirteen inches At Steamboat Springs the water was forced up through the earth to the hight of twenty five feet

Figaro says it will take until the latter part of January to arrange the expected Jubilee to be given in aid of the Mercantile Library Building Fund Something over 1,500 singers 300 musicians 100 drummers, and 100 firemen will take part in the programme The firemen are for the anvil chorus A battery of cannon will be discharged on Stockton street, by electricity

The Salt Lake Telegraph of December 22d has the following William C Staines has returned from the East, where he was on business for the Utah Central Railroad He brings information that 150 car loads of iron for the Utah Central are between Omaha and Ogden, moving on westward This will bring the track into this city The delay hitherto has been in consequence of the iron not being on hand as fast as required As track laying will be resumed immediately, with the full quantity of iron required on hand, we will see the line finished in a very short time should the weather be at all favorable

An English traveler in California who stopped at Clarke's Ranche near the Yosemite thus describes the proprietor ' To look at him with his tough dress rougher beard, and trousers Western fashion, stuck into his boots you might carelessly put him down for a coarse tobacco chewing swearing son of the forest But take a flower or a fir cone in your hand and ask him what it is He will give you at once its Latin name in soft measured speech and with courteous rejoinder He had a few books in the window of the bacon [illegible] I laid my hand at once on Goethe's Faust and Robertson's 'Sermons Again and again we met with combinations or contrasts of character in the same individual which I think could hardly be found in the old world '

OREGON

The shipments of flour from Albany during December amounted to an aggregate of 5 [illegible] 9 sacks

Major Geo Williams, late of the United States army, has gone into the General Agency business at Salem

Two substantial bridges have recently been erected over the Calapooia near Brownsville, at a cost of $2 000

The Linn County Agricultural Society has a proposition pending before it to donate $500 toward the railroad fund

The Register says Rev Joab Powell the noted preacher of Santiam Forks is not dead as recently reported though he has been dangerously ill he is now recovering

The Brownsville correspondent of the Register gives an account of the hazing of a school teacher by his pupils because he wouldn't [illegible] They gave him a ducking in a pool wet his linen and spoiled his watch

We have received a letter from Mr A J [illegible] of this county written at Chelsea Vermont December 11th in which he informs us that he intended to start shortly upon a tour through the Canadas At the date of writing he was in daily expectation of a package of the 'Statistics of Oregon, and he states that he will scatter all the copies received as he travels He further says 'The farmers, mechanics and men of small means manifest a lively interest in learning the resources of our State wherever I have traveled or distributed our useful these reports, and many are preparing to convert their means into cash leave the inhospitable climate and sterile soil of Happy New England,' come to our coast and make Oregon their future home '

TUESDAY MORNING, JANUARY 11 1870

CITY.

Minor Matters —The Senator and Alert from Oregon City yesterday, brought down over 1 000 barrels of flour and as many bushels of wheat

The new side wheel steamer Mary Bell made a trial trip down the river yesterday evening start ing at five o'clock We did not learn the result

The Puget Sound Homestead Association of this city, has established an agency in Salem, with George Williams as agent

Portland has now over thirty two miles of good sidewalk and more than five and a half miles of plank roadway

A splendid job of plastering in panelled and figured work, is being done on the Lodge Room in the Odd Fellows' Temple third story

The County Commissioners for Multnomah County met at one o'clock yesterday but transacted no other business than to audit a number of bills against the county and adjourn sine die

The bark Whistler received an additional lot of freight by the boat from Oregon City yesterday consisting of flour and pork

The Circuit Court for the Fourth Judicial District, for Clatsop county, will convene this morning at Astoria. Judge Upton went down on the boat yesterday to preside

In the United States District Court yesterday in the matter of J Levy, bankrupt, an order was made granting petitioner a final discharge

In Justice Court, before Recorder Anderson yesterday, Mrs Nancy Boggs was fined twenty five dollars and costs or thirty days imprisonment in the county jail An appeal was taken to the Circuit Court. The charge against her is larceny

The schooner Champion sailed for Tillamook yesterday with a full cargo, mostly groceries

The Oregon City boats yesterday brought down a number of fine hogs, killed and dressed ready for packing. Considerable activity is manifested in the meat market at this time

A rumor was circulated on the streets yesterday of the death of Mr. J. W Carter at Victoria but we could not trace it to any authentic source

The case of Glenira Holmes vs I J Holmes is set down for argument in the United States Circuit Court this morning

A quantity of hay was landed at East Portland yesterday by the Fanny Troupe.

The Wallamet river has seldom been as low at this season of the year since the whites settled this country as it is now

The weather "slewed around" yesterday morning, and the regular webfoot rains set in

We had an item about skating, but owing to other matters we concluded to let it slide

Thieves and Murderers —Sunday night a Portland merchant in this city went to his lodging and retired as usual, and soon fell asleep Soon after, the other inmates of the house were startled by the rattling of furniture, the smashing of window glasses, lamps and tumblers mingled with cries of "robbers," "thieves," and "murder " Rushing to the room of the merchant afore said his fellow lodgers found him out of bed and standing in the middle of the floor, apparently in a state of the greatest fright with his pistol, at which he had evidently been hurling lamps, seemingly on some object through the room, tumblers and other loose objects about the room. The situation was very ludicrous one when it turned out that the thieves that were be setting him were only the creatures of the imagination conjured up from the mysterious land of dreams. He may have a small bill to pay for glass smashed, etc, but will doubtless feel thankful that "life is not all it seems in sleep "

Slips and Falls —The sidewalks yesterday were decidedly slippery, and great care on the part of pedestrians was necessary to keep a perpendicular position at all times when traveling the streets. Two gentlemen were pretty badly injured by slipping and falling Mr W Collins slipped on the walk at the corner of Alder and Front streets, and fell, and his head striking against the corner of the building, he received a severe cut from which it will take him several days to recover Mr Goodwin, of Ladd & Tilton's Bank, while on the way to his place of business made a misstep and fell upon his wrist spraining it badly. Quite a number of others fell during the day, but we heard of no other cases where the consequences were any way serious The walks were getting less slippery and more so last night.

The Sound Trade —But a few years have passed since a small number or pack horses could have carried over the mountains all the freight going from this place to Victoria and other ports on Puget Sound. During the past year, a portion of the time, two steamers have been running over the water route with a fair business, and the Telfair has been making regular trips with a full cargo each way. Especially have her freights from Portland been heavy. The last few trips she has made have shown the necessity of another or larger vessel With these facts in view, the steamship California has been chartered and will take her place on the route in making her first trip hence to Victoria on or about the 25th of this month

From the Country.—A gentleman from the country informs us that stock have needed but little feeding thus far through the winter, the weather having been unusually good during the latter part of Autumn and in early winter. Many farmers have plowed considerable and a large portion of land is in excellent condition to receive Spring crops. In a great many fields the fall sown wheat had grown to a height of more than a foot, and makes a most excellent winter range for cattle Upon this, farmers are keeping their stock fat without any other food what ever. All begin now to feel that the prophesies made last fall of a hard winter, will prove un true.

U. S. Circuit Court.—The United States Circuit Court, Hon. M. P. Deady, Judge, presiding, convened yesterday morning at ten o'clock

In the case of Wm. Walker vs D B Hanna et al, the Court found that the plaintiff was entitled to the possession of lots 1 and 2 in block 1, in Carruthers' Addition to the city of Portland

The order of the Court setting the case of John McCardell vs I. A Davenport et al, for trial was vacated

The Court adjourned until ten A M to day

The Alaska.—Several of our cotemporaries have published a report that the schooner Alaska, plying between ports on this coast and the Sandwich Islands, was lost near the mouth of the Coquille river some time since. This is a mistake, arising from the fact that a small vessel by the same name was wrecked at that place, for the Alaska schooner left this port only a few days ago and is now lying at Rainier, unless she has sailed within two days

Not Lost.—Our item concerning the Helen W Almy yesterday was based upon information obtained from our California exchanges, but Capt Hoyt has received a letter from the Captain of the Almy a few days since, in which it was stated that she would not sail from San Francisco before the 6th inst., if so early Hence she should not be due here for some time yet

To be Sold.—We see by the S F Bulletin that the steamship Nevada, which formerly ran on the route between San Francisco and Nicaragua, is to be sold at auction, to satisfy a mortgage held by W. H. Webb, the great steamship man who lately arrived in California from the East. The Nevada is owned by the North American Steamship Company

Lectures —By reference to notice published elsewhere, it will be seen that a course of lectures are shortly to be delivered in this city upon theological subjects. The lecturers are Rev Mr Lilly, of Washington county, and Dr Watts, of Yamhill. The first lecture will be given next Monday, one week from this evening

Team Down —A team of horses slipped and fell on the roadway down to the wharf of the O. S. N. Co., yesterday, nearly in the same place as the horse fell on Saturday It would be well to have these inclines made more safe or have teams more roughly shod The fall yesterday did not result in any damage

Annual Meeting —The annual meeting of the First Unitarian Society of Portland will be held at their Church this evening at 7½ o clock P M, for the choice of three Trustees and to transact such other business as may properly come before them. All those interested in its welfare are invited to be present

Postponed —The grand Cotillion Excursion to Astoria, by the steamer Mary Bell heretofore mentioned, has been postponed for one week in order to enable the committee to more fully perfect every arrangement necessary to render the affair a grand success.

New Sidewalk —A new sidewalk is being laid on the north side of Main street between Front and First.

Steep The rafters of the new Lutheran Church are up and show that the roof will be the most acute rain splitter in the city We should judge the angle of inclination to be at least between sixty five and seventy five degrees

Gone —The mother of B L Norden, Esq County Clerk, departed this life yesterday morning She had been quite ill for several weeks Mr Norden has many friends who sympathize with him in his heavy affliction

Allowed —The County Commissioners at their session yesterday allowed a large number of bills against the county for services rendered as witnesses &c in the Circuit Court at the last term

The Evening Call —We are requested to say that owing to an accident in the office of publication the Daily Evening Call will not appear until this afternoon at half past three o'clock

Needed —It would be a good move if the Street Commissioner would have the cross walks in many places cleaned again, as the thaw has left them in an unpleasant condition

The Ajax —The steamship Ajax, which left San Francisco for this port last Sunday is advertised to sail hence on Tuesday the 18th inst

Live Yankee —This bark has been receiving her cargo for several days, and is now nearly full She will be ready to sail in a few days

The New York Tribune says the Cuban Junta will present to Congress a petition a couple of miles long and containing 30 000 names! This allowing the names to be written in single column, gives a space say three inches by seven, for each name, which ought to be enough for even the loudest Juntist's autograph

Co operation is being generally agitated among the working men of New York city, and it is probable that next spring will witness the opening of several co operative establishments Among the trades now moving are the cigar makers, who contemplate opening a large cigar manufactory, the shoemakers members of the Knights of St Crispin, who expect to start in business with a capital of $100,000, the clothing cutters, who will apply for a charter for their proposed co-operative tailoring establishment, and who will commence business as soon as $10 000 worth of stock is disposed of, and the journeymen tailors, who have thoroughly organized for this purpose

A Sight of the Emperor and Prince Imperial

[Correspondence of the Missouri Democrat]

Paris, Nov 30th —I saw the Emperor yesterday. The occasion was his passage from the Tuileries to the Louvre to deliver his address to the Chamber of Deputies The route was simply a straight line from west to east across the Place du Carrousel a distance of not more than five hundred yards The Place du Carrousel is an immense area inclosed on all sides by the Palace buildings It derived its name from a great tournament held there by Louis XIV in 1662 It was afterwards used by Napoleon I as a place in which to review his soldiers. The present Emperor uses a portion of it to inspect the troops who guard the Tuileries On the east and west it has a large number of arched passages leading out upon different streets and quays.

The hour for the appearance of his Majesty was fixed at one o'clock On arriving at the spot I found the immense space filled with soldiers and the populace. From one palace to the other, with a width of about fifty feet, the line of the route was covered with a yellow sand, to soften the passage, for you must know that the Place du Carrousel is paved with a flinty stone, which makes a terrible clatter when driven upon by vehicles On both sides of this road bed of sand were drawn up in double file the National Guard Behind them stood the police, and behind the police the multitudes who came to see In various spots in the court were stationed little knots of troops The safety of the Emperor seemed to be guaranteed beyond the possibility of a doubt. There was no trouble anticipated, however. It is not on such occasions as these that the assassin fires his pistol or hurls his torpedo from the house top.

Precisely at one, in the direction of the Tuileries I heard a blare of trumpets, and looking up I saw from the central pavilion of the palace a soldier waving slowly the flag of the country Immediately following came the concussion of a heavy discharge of artillery stationed at the Invalides, about two miles distant All Paris was thus advised that the Emperor was en route. A faint huzza and the uneasy surging of the crowd beyond, advised me the supreme moment was near First a squad of horsemen, then two or three carriages with occupants the horses gayly decked and the vehicles trimmed with gold "There he is!" shouted a few "No," "No! answered the police and others Another detachment of cavalry followed by a coach of glass and gold, drawn by majestically caparisoned steeds, the driver and the footman shining gorgeously in their gold lace and other tinselry. Loud cheers arose around me and peering over the heads in front I saw the Emperor a stoutish-looking man, with thin gray hair, seated easily in the carriage, dressed in soldier's uniform, and frequently lifting his hat to the multitudes Beside him sat a little gentle faced boy, the Prince who also acknowledged the cheers by raising his hat I stood with a little knot of Americans and we all felt disappointed at the apparent lack of enthusiasm in the crowd Once, in fact, we gave a hearty 'Vive l Empereur!" to show them our respect for the brave man who was passing by, for however much our democratic instincts may revolt at the abstract Imperial tyranny, and however much we may feel like deriding such glaring pomp as marked the cortege that passed before us, we cannot restrain our admiration of so wise and intrepid a ruler as Napoleon III

His Majesty passed on and entered the grand Hall of the Louvre, where he delivered his short address of not more than fifteen minutes reading, and then returned by the same route to the Tuileries. From Minister Washburne, who was present at the delivery of the address, I learn that the Emperor read it in a full, round tone, with great deliberation and emphasis At one point in it, where he said 'France is anxious for liberty but accompanied by order for the latter I answer,' the cheering was immense Another incident is of some interest When the Deputies were announced and the name of Rochefort called there was a very decided laugh of derision in the Assembly followed by hearty cheers for the Emperor Rochefort is one of those brass mounted fellows upon whom no incident of this kind could have any effect The man knew very well that he was in [illegible] the house his friends and probably consoled himself by the reflection that if the 18,000 voters who returned him from the First Circumscription of Paris could have a fair shake at my Lords and Ladies of the galleries and benches around him they would make short work of their laced coats cocked hats and other gewgaws of state The temper of the "roughs" who collected to see the show was shown in their treatment of the distinguished personages who attended the Emperor on all state occasions The aristocratic worthies in leaving the palace were obliged to pass out of the court into the Rue de Rivoli on the one side and the Quai de l Ecole on the other These streets were so jammed with people that the carriages containing the Lords and Ladies were frequently choked up and stopped for minutes at the time during which, rough men and women crowded against the wheels and peered impudently in at the win dows At one moment a knot of mischievous Americans by way of experiment started a groan which the crowd quickly caught and continued for a time winding up with cheers for Rochefort The behavior of the dignitaries under all this rudeness and insult was a pattern of nonchalance They were used to it I suppose

Home Questions for the Sickly and Debilitated.

Is it worth while to endure penal torture after every meal when indigestion can be immediately relieved and permanently cured by so agreeable a remedy as HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS!

Does it pay to be compelled by debility and languor to abandon active business when brain nerve and muscle can be braced up, and the whole system restored to a healthy condition by a course of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS?

Why approach the dinner table daily with a positive disgust for all that is savory and delicious when a vigorous appetite for even the plainest fare is created by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS!

Is it wise to live in this bright world as if it were a dungeon gloomy discontented and miserable when the worst case of hypochondria can be cured in a week by such a pleasant and wholesome exhilarant as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS?

Can it be possible that any person of ill [illegible] will run the risk of intermittent fever or billious colic when he can tone and regulate the great secretive organ with HOSTETTER'S BITTERS!

Is it not a species of mental insanity for any miner or planter in the interior or any traveler or sojourner on the places to go without [illegible] the best known antidote to the effects of poisonous air and impure water HOSTETTER'S BITTERS?

Considering the harassing and depressing nature of the functional derangements which woman is subject is it not astonishing that any invalid of the softer sex should hesitate to seek the certain relief afforded in such cases by the genial operation of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS!

These are questions of deeper interest than any of the political dogmas of the day and those whom they concern are invited to give them something more than a passing thought

Something like a Story

BY THE AUTHOR OF "PICTURES IN TYROL"

Heinrich run and see if they are ready to change guard, and whether father will soon be home to supper the porridge is ready and the poor man needs fattening sorely for what with standing upright all day like a stick watching on the ramparts, and dodging behind a corner of the tower when those base Hohenstaufeners make a target of his honest face he needs good oatmeal to keep his courage up. It's ill fighting on an empty stomach and one needs eat and sleep whatever happens."

"O mother!" cried a little child from her little stool by the fire, "when will the wicked soldiers go away? I do so want to run out into the fields again, and gather the flowers and see our poor cow. It would be so nice to have some beautiful rich milk again, I don't like porridge without any milk in it, and the poor dear cow must be so sad and lonely without ever seeing us, she must long for some salt as much as I long for the cream mother, and I want to show her my doll. Dolly hasn't had a walk for ever so long."

"I'll tell you what will happen if you walk in the fields with your precious old doll," cried Heinrich; "the soldiers will catch you and then they'll make a big fire as big as a house, and they'll lay a spit across it where its hottest, and they'll put the doll on the spit—so—and then it'll frizz and smell horribly, like the shabby bits of the old fleece when mother burnt them—and then won't you cry! Oh! oh! oh! what fun! I'd go and walk in the fields if I were you wouldn't I?" and Master Heinrich turned heels over head across the kitchen table.

"Go away, you naughty boy!" said little Elfrida, beginning to sob, "how dare you say my doll would smell horribly? She's a beautiful dear, and they shouldn't burn her—they should burn me first," and the little five year old maid en stamped her tiny feet and shook her fist defiantly.

"They'd burn you afterwards," teased Heinrich, "when dolly was frizzled, they'd cook you, you are so fat you would be first rate, and when you were done real brown, they'd take you to the great fierce Conrad, and he would open his mouth—so—and swallow you at one gulph. They'd give the doll to the soldiers, she'd be tough."

Heinrich made a horrible contortion and snapped expressively at the air, Elfrida cried, hot, angry tears chasing each other down the round pink cheeks, till the mother who had been gazing from the door, heedless of the children's talk turned round, and seeing her little daughter's distress and vaguely comprehending it, administered swift justice on the culprit with a sounding blow from the porridge spoon, and taking the little one into her comfortable arms, she kissed and consoled her.

"A plague on the boys! They are worse than any one. Haven't we trouble enough outside the walls, but you must needs make your sister cry, and worry my life out! What is it, my lamb? Tell mother where he hurt you. Ah! here's father, now it's all right then and father will give her some of his supper, and we'll dry our eyes. Well, my man you must be tired enough and hungry too! What faint hearted father! Why I never saw thee come home with such a hang down face before. Hast left the walls in ruins? Why, pluck up heart man, as long as the old town stands we'll show fight, a cherry face goes a long way in this world, and glad eyes make a glad heart. I've no patience with folks who declare it's always raining because they are crying behind their own windows. Eat the porridge, father, and then thou wilt shout Down with the Hohenstaufen' with the best of them."

"Eh, 'tis easy talking, wife," said the burgher as, drawing off his heavy cap, he sank down wearily on the settee. "'Tis hard to jest with a heavy heart; who'd care to make fight for the saucepan when the soup was eaten? Don't bandy words with me, but kiss thy husband and give him his supper, 'tis the last thou'lt do for him in this world, unless may be thou art up in time to cook me a [illegible]—[illegible]."

"Now, thunder and lightning! the man's gone clean daft in his head! It's like a wolf than a kiss you'll get if you come home with such talk as that as relish for supper. Eat your food, and thank heaven for it and for giving you a wife who will dish you up another bowl full for the next fortnight, an' the meal hold out."

"Nay nay, then Elspeth. It is no joke of mine or wandering either. The town sent a flag of truce to the Hohenstaufens at twelve to-day, and Conrad's answer was free pardon for the women and children, who should depart unscathed and laden with her treasures, but for the men unconditional surrender, and it is thought it will go hard with us and the town, for the sold ers are angered by our long defence, and their master is hard to deal with when his will has been crossed."

"And you sit there and tell such a tale as that to your own wife," cried Elspeth, "and think you can look me in the face while you do it! What do you take me for father who have looked after you, and loved you, and mended and cooked for you all these years?" and her voice shook; "I who have vowed to care for you this side of heaven—and precious hard you'd find it to get there without me—to say nothing of the washing—and have stood by you and the children through thick and thin? You are going to say, 'Good morning Elspeth, a fine journey to you,' and I'm to go from my own home and my own house, and leave you and the Hohenstaufeners to sup off schinken together! You've not got to the bottom of the wife's mind yet, my master. If I go from Weinsberg to-morrow morning I'll take you with me!"

The father only answered, "Eh, eh, it is easy talking," and smothering something that sounded like a groan, he held out his arms to the child. Elfrida seated herself cosily on his knee and stroked the sorrowful face and fed him with great spoonfuls of porridge as it was her nightly pleasure to do. She was a very fair little maiden so short and so fat that measure her where you would she was the same length all over. her eyes were very large, round and blue, just like the bluest summer sky when you have forgotten there can ever be clouds again and her cheeks were round also and summer and winter two roses bloomed there, from morning till night. The child laid her face against her father's shoulder and whispered:

"You won't let me go? Heinrich says they will cook Dolly and me and he says she's [illegible] it was very cruel of him. Oh father don't let them have Dolly and me!"

A great sob came in her father's throat he tried to look as if the porridge had choked him and cleared his voice but after all the words would not come, so he only held her very closely and kissed her shining hair.

Meanwhile Elspeth was restless she walked about the house with an air of strange excitement pacing up and down the rooms. At length flinging a hood over her head, she cried:

"Don't speak to me or wait for me but put the child to bed and let those sleep who can. I must speak a word to the Town Council before ever I close my eyes."

"Poor soul!" sighed the husband, "thy mother's a bit sharp at times but she's true as steel. I knew it would go hard with her, let her talk as she will she'll find the deed's done and the terms accepted, and before the sunset to-morrow every wife and child will be safe out of poor old Weinsberg and heaven help those who are left! You'll have to begin a new life to-morrow my son," he said turning to Heinrich who astounded by the sudden turn matters had taken sat quiet and open eyed by the fire having swallowed the last morsel of supper.

"Thou must care for [illegible] her and the little one and work hard to earn them a [illegible] of bread. It will be lucky if poor father's head is not stuck on his own [illegible] pikestaff."

At this awful prognostication Heinrich began to cry and his sister instantly joined chorus; the burgher found he had hardly improved matters and so proposed as a [illegible] cheerful suggestion that they should all go to bed. [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] manner of children forgetting all their sorrows in a sound sleep [illegible]

Elspeth was back again before morning [illegible] found the [illegible] and [illegible] by the cold hearth.

"Let [illegible] sleep [illegible] soul," she said, "to lie [illegible] out of my way [illegible] done between this and [illegible] What [illegible] thought I should [illegible] baggage and a [illegible] to the army out yonder and let those [illegible] walk over the threshold [illegible] there to cover him and a woman of my figure is a brave target and a shield not to be despised. Bless thee dear heart!" and she [illegible] for a moment and a sudden tenderness pressed her lips on the tired forehead, "please God we'll march out to-morrow with all our treasures and who would be the man who dared turn us back."

Slowly a glimmer of light came in the east which deepened and spread till the morning sunshine streamed upon the man's face. He smiled and shook himself and then aw[oke] with a [illegible] and a look of uttermost sorrow [illegible] memory returned and he realized that the moment of parting was very near. There was a sound of steps and suppressed voices in the street which increased momentarily [illegible] there was a crowd of eager women passing and repassing the door and whispered consultations with Elspeth who with her strong vigorous face and figure stood like a tower of strength among them all. She lit the fire and prepared the breakfast quietly for the last time tied on little Frida's hood and her [illegible] slung the bundle she had been preparing [illegible] her waist and then turning to her husband said in a strange firm voice:

"I am ready; let us go."

Like a man in a dream he followed her silently, only, as they crossed the threshold he took her hand and said:

"We have been very happy here, wife. Heaven keep and bless thee," and kissed her cheek.

For a moment her heart failed her and she turned and clung to him for a moment only and then she set her teeth hard and walked steadily forward. The gate of the town was open; in the plain below you could see the great Conrad's army thrown up in proud array, their tents glistening in the morning light. In the town the burghers crowed around the walls and thronged the gates as the sad and silent procession of women and little children advanced toward it.

When Elspeth reached the warder's tower, she stopped and placed the hand of little daughter in Heinrich's bidding him to see to the child, then in a clear loud voice she cried:

"Women of Weinsberg! I have read the edict it is true and sure, and the Hohenstaufen has pledged his honor to keep faith with us. The women may depart in safety and may carry with them the greatest of their treasures! So be it Conrad! and thus we women of Weinsberg answer your proclamation," then suddenly flinging her arms around her astonished husband she raised him on her back, crying to a neighbour at his side:

"Lend a hand there, Jacob and place him firmly; and thou, husband hold fast and fear nothing. I'll carry thee to the tent of Conrad himself!"

And so from the beleaguered town in quiet but solemn procession, moved men and women two and two. Many were the slips and hard the task to be accomplished but with unfaltering steps the brave Elspeth marched at their head with her children beside her, and her husband's long legs dangling helplessly by her apron—so she went stern and silent, with her face well set toward the plain, only as she passed the great Hohenstaufen himself as he stood before his tent she paused to say:

"Pardon good Conrad that I cannot make thee fitting obeisance but my treasure is fairly heavy, and I have much ado to carry him, so I wish thee a good even and many thanks for thy courtesy."

"Potz tausend! Donner and Blitz! Hammer and tongs and three dozen tenpenny tintacks!" cried Conrad, using the favorite expletives of his time, "that I, that I the great Hohenstaufener should live to be outwitted by a woman!"

Legal Tender rates in San Francisco 81¼ buying and 82½ selling

Portland Legal Tender rates, 81@82

Our markets present no changes to-day worthy of note. The absence of sea-going vessels except the barks Live Yankee and Whistler makes the wharves, where for some days past business has been unusually active, appear barren and still. The river steamers do their usual amount of carrying and for more than a week have come down every day heavily loaded with produce.

Wheat of choice quality is worth 75 cents per bushel while a poorer variety can be had for 60 cents. The amount of wheat in the hands of farmers is still great and as prices are firm some may be holding off for better rates. Our latest dispatches from Liverpool note a decline, but telegrams and exchanges from the Eastern market are encouraging in respect to the demand for the product.

Flour is yet in good supply and the only demand beyond, is for export hereafter. The valley millers are turning out a large quantity this winter, and are to judge from the rates at which grain is going doing well.

Oats are in better supply than last week though by no means a drug in the market.

Fruit is scarcer and prices though unchanged are firm at our quotations. Full supplies of sugar in store have a tendency to bear that article somewhat. Groceries of all kinds are at full rates with no unusual tendency to fluctuate. Dry goods are on hand in quantities fully up to the demand. Dealers appear in good courage at the prospects of a fair business in the spring.

Horrible Disease

[illegible] thousands of persons, both male and female [illegible] who are suffering out of [illegible] [illegible] absorbed into the system! Look at their bloated and disfigured faces and their broken [illegible] disqualifying them for the [illegible] or the enjoyment of life. In this horrid [illegible] thousands suffer until death closes the scene [illegible] guardians friends attend to the [illegible] any of these horrible [illegible] they are cared for and cured before it be [illegible] them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, who has made private diseases his especial study [illegible] is certain to cure the most inveterate [illegible] cury or any injurious drugs. It is [illegible] who are afflicted or to those who are [illegible] welfare of their friends, to be careful of [illegible] tended doctors who infest all cities [illegible] in curing all diseases in a few days [illegible] public by using the names of eminent [illegible] Eur[ope] and other places. But [illegible] strict inquiry [illegible] you may fall into the [illegible] barly [illegible]

Seminal Weakness

Seminal [illegible] the solitary vice or depraved [illegible] by the youth of both sexes to an [illegible] producing with unerring certainty, the [illegible] of morbid symptoms unless combatted [illegible] cal measures viz Sallow [illegible] the eyes pain in the head [illegible] the rustling of leaves and [illegible] about the loins weakness of the limbs [illegible] blunted intellect loss of confidence [illegible] proaching strangers a dislike to form[illegible] a disposition to shun society; loss of [illegible] flushes pimples and various eruptions [illegible] furred tongue fetid breath coughs [illegible] sweats mon mania and frequently [illegible] not obtained should apply immediately [illegible] or by letter and have a cure effected by [illegible] entire mode of treating this disease [illegible] effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr G will give [illegible] Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove [illegible] rily to him that he was cured of this [illegible] of the San Francisco quacks

Caution to the Unfortunate

Beware of the San Francisco quacks [illegible] with bogus sworn to certificates [illegible] Some of the self styled doctors [illegible] found in the daily and weekly [illegible] since and other places are [illegible] lazy to work at their trades. Some are [illegible] makers newspaper carriers, tavern [illegible] etc. Look over the San Francisco [illegible] will not find their Medical [illegible] find the former occupations in it. Look at the Directory for 1862 and 1863. The only way to avoid deception is to make enquiry—it will cost you nothing and may save you many regrets for, as advertising physicians in nine cases out of ten, are [illegible] safety in trusting any of them until you know what they are. Dr Gibbon does not [illegible] exhibiting bogus titles certificates [illegible] letters etc. Dr Gibbon will satisfy [illegible] call at his office of his ability to treat [illegible] proposes to cure.
